THE GALLOWS.

Execution of Oliver A. Morgan at Terre nte, Ind., for the Marder of John Petri-The Prisoner's Appearance-A Speech from the Scaffold-His Confessions.

[Terre Haute, Ind. (Dec. 23), correspondence Cincinnati Gazette.]

APPEARANCE OF THE PRISONER.

Morgan, as he appeared in the jail, was a short, thick set man about five feet eight or nine incheshigh, but exceedingly wiry and muscular? His head was covered with a profusion of curing light brown hair, while he had on his chin a rather sparse browhish red goatee, with a mustache of the same kind on his upper lip. His face was an enigma. His nose rather sharp and prominent, and cheek cones projecting, he looked at one moment the cunning villian and the next, perhaps, a man of a not unpleasant demeanor.

THE PREPARATIONS.

A few minutes after eleven o'clock preparations began to be made for the execution. The minister, Mr. Stimson, with a half dozen others, crowded into the small cell for the purpose of attending to the closing ceremonies. To a question by Mr. Simson, whether he had any desire to have the execution inviber delayed, he stated that he had not. If he had to go ne wanted to go. Mr. Stimson asked nim if he wished him to pray with him. He answered, "I have no objection." He was asked if he desired to pray himself, and be said he did not. He then knelt beside the minister, who offered up an earnest and simple petition, during which time the prisoner seemed to be visably affected. When Mr. Stimson had concluded Morgan, still on his knees, leaned far forward upon his chair and seemed to be engaged in silent prayer, although he did not utter a word. He may have been weeping only. He was after the lapse of a minute or two aroused, when he lifted up his face. When asked if he had any further requests to make he said he wished to be left alone for a few moments. This he was informed was not possible. The request had previously been made to the Sheriff and he had declined to accede to it, as he had shown a disposition to commit suicide if opportunity offered and was very closely watched to prevent it last night.

In making him ready it was discovered that his hat was lost, and a baiff was despatched to get him a or 800 people. He shook nands with those on the scaffold, and Deputy Sherlif Stewart read the death warrank. Morgan then stepped forward to the front and said:—

A SCAPPOLD HARANGUE.

GENTIEMEN—I have not been brought up here to convict any one of any crime, but I am put upon the scaffold to suffer death for a crime of which I am innoce fit, and with which I had nothing to do except in self-defence. I did kill the man, and what did I kill him for? Because he was a robber and a thief. Because he took my money and my property from me and then said he would have my life; but now I must lose my life for it. It is a hard thing to give up my life for the killing of such a vagaboud. The hard? The hard with a peculiar smile, and he continued:—

"It seems to me, when I look back, that you are invisting a nation of people to visit your land from a foreign country, and so they are doing it. They are about one-third of them that country and no man can deny it that he was."

At this point Mr. May, the brother-in-law of Petri, who was standing near him, was heard to mutter a denial, coupled with an oath, and seemed to make a motion as though to strike him. Others interfered, and he was led nurther back.

Morgan stood for a moment and looked around, when the concluded as follows:—

"Well, I don't know as I have much to say. I expect I had better be a going. In fact, I have no doubt of it. I feel prepared for death. I trust I may meet all Christians on the other since of Jordan own was a standard as follows:—

"Well, I don't know as I have much to say. I expect I had better be a going. In fact, I have no doubt of it. I feel prepared for death. I trust I may meet all Christians on the other since of Jordan own hims because the was ended he stepped back to his position on the drop, the black cap was put over his head, his knees bound together the noose acquisted, and at sixteen minutes past tweive o'clock a deputy sheriff gave a vigorous kick at an iron pin which projec although the effort was a merely muscular one, and it is probable that it was not accompanied with pain, as it was subsequently discovered that his neck was dislocated by the rail. It was merely the result of a strong muscular system to assist its power and tenacity of life. As it was the pulse did not cease to beat until ten minutes after the drop fell, and the heart moved until thirteen minutes after. After twenty minutes had elapsed the physicians pronounced him dead, when the body was taken down and placed in a plann coffin for burial.

THE LATEST CONFESSION.

Morgan has made several statements which he claimed to be confessions, although they all bear the marks of falsehood upon their faces; the last one, which was written out by him yesterday, and which is printed below, verbattm, being no exception:—

OLIVER ANSON MORGAN.

Convict of Deain

I WILL Gir in This my Hand Write As to How John Petri Came to life beath of the was in the secret work with Cheaf of Police altoway in sodoing it brought me in contact with a grate many of the one horse grocery keepers and saloones however before the death of mr Alloway we gained some litting ground, just enough to work on. he then Died in the spring of 69—in the winter before his death our expoler (expoure) was grated but the coid snow and rain never stopped the task that we undertook to work on—but death did. I could not trust any one that I knew so I had to go it alone, it was with grate care that I saved my life more than once, for that, I worked away, Remembering that Alloway told me to do that witch I did-fowing following 7) the track he put me on. I found six different grosers keepers that was a dealing with stoling goods, I went out to John Petr's boses and watched different ones that larked around that house. I seen two men therefish at I knew was robbers. I follered out these twice one of tiem was a rival of mile and took a drink by town one interfehal in the search that level would firm, but what did I care for that. I wanted to send not of the search was a

this is al that I am able to give—
ADVICE TO ROYS.

Morgan was interviewed by Frank B. Ainsworth, superintendent of the House of Refuge, this morning, when he dictated the following as his advice to the boys under his charge:—
"Teil the boys that I am not acquainted with them, but that I wish them all well. Teil them to be good-boys and to do right; not to take me as an example, but to embrace reignon while they are young and to practice it all through life. Teil them to prepare themselves while there for a useful life when they become men, and, above all things, to avoid the use of intoxicating liquors and avoid the fate which I have to mele."

Nyisits FROM RELATIVES.

During the whole time of his incarceration he was not visited by any of his relatives. Indeed, it does not appear that he has any such in this country, except his three sisters, who live in Rushville.

THE GENERAL FREILING.

Any effort to solve the mystery which surrounded this singular man during the later days of his life must prove, to a very great extent, unsatisfactory. Offfed with a vigorous body and mind he has repeatedly shown a disposition to administer good advice, in the way of warning to his associates. He has shown at times a confidence in the truth of the promises of the Gospel, and his letters and his apeech on the gallows contain expressions of confidence that sativation awaited him. And yet his most intimate friends and advisers admit that he has never been thrown off his guard, but had concealed at all times the lowest depths of his feetings from view. His actions give a positive denial of the truth of his pretended confessions, and he went to his fast home with undoubted falsenoods upon his hips. He has shown at times instances of almost total depravity, one of these being no longer ago than last night. After his interview with his preferred spiritual adviser, Rev. Mr. Stimson, in which the latter left a strong hope that his better feelings had finally been reached, and after the unfortunate man had for the first time expressed a desire that he should return to-day, he showed his utter want of all moral sensibility, almost before Mr. Stimson had got outside the jed, by dreign the Sheriff, as a last boon, to allow him to have a woman in the cell with him last night.

"Upon the whole the man who has to-day answered the demands of the law with his life succeeded in making a most unfavorable impression of himself and in checking and blotting out almost every feeling of sympathy in his favor from the first. Among all those conversant with the case there does not exist the shadow of a dout of his guil, and in recalling him to memory a very strong draft must be made upon charity in order to give him the most moderate amount of credit for honorable motives.

Lecture by Rev. Dr. D. Einhorn on the Third and Fourth Resolutions Passed by the Rab-binical Conference—The Institution of Priesthood Has Lost All Significance— Bloody Sacrifices Not in Accord with the Progressive Spirit of the Jewish Religion. Rabbi Einhorn lectured on Saturday at the Temple Adath Jeshurun before a large and refined congrega-tion on the recent Rabbinical Conference in Phila-

Aaronic priests consisted in carrying out the pre-cepts of the sacrificial rites, the instruction of the people in the law of God, and especially, in deciding between the sacred and profane, the clean and unpower in all civil and criminal cases, and they were commanded to bless the people. To these functions were annexed certain duties and privileges, as, for metance, the share in portions of the animals offered as sacrifices, the prohibition of into xicating beverages, of teating their clothes in cases of mourning, the contamination of corpses and the marriage with certain classes. On what rested this distinction of a class among all people that claimed to be a nation of priests? Though the saic behest, we yet find in Jewish history an intense struggie against the priestly aristocracy which finally resulted in reducing the priestly privileges to

FEARFUL RIOT ON A BAILROAD TRAIN.

(From the Springded (III), Register, Dec. 22.)
From a passenger who arrived here from the South on the Chicago and St Louis Railroad train, due here at twenty-dwe minutes past nine o'clock last nignt, we learn the particulars of one of the most brutar and shameless outrages we have ever been called on to chronick.

Atsome point below Auburn dwe drunken Irishmen got on the train and past their fare to that point, after some heatsation. They were furnished with the ordinary checks for way passengers, can check bearing a number signifying the station to which they had paid. After the train left Auburn the conduction of the seasod in the smoking car to detail they had paid. After the train left Auburn the conduction of the seasod in the smoking car to detail they had past their station. They replied they were going to Chatham, the next station north of Auburn. Mr. Clark said they had paid to Auburn only, and must pay an additional fare if they wished to go further. They insisted they had paid to Chatham, but on being shown the tickets, which plainity proved they had paid to Auburn only, they assailed the conductor with the most brutal imprecations, and deciared they would ride to Chatham or anywhere they pleased, with or without fare. Upon this Mr. Clark left them and went to collect the remainder of this fares before entering into any further controversy.

But this apparenticity gater Mr. Clark left the earthey followed him for the purpose, as they declared, of beating him. The leader of the gang found his way to the ladies' car, which he attempted to enter. He was met by a brakeman, who opposed his entrance of the conductor. The gentlemen, therefore, in the ladies' car sprang upon the intruder. The first who approached him was thought of the passengers were thoroughly aroused to the position. The train was proceeding at full speed, and among peaceful passengers were five rullians, whose ordinary brutality was increased by whiskey, and by the peaceful demeanor of the conductor. The guidelines had been first modere
